

Closed

Idea:

A closed object separates the region in which it's living into a clear inside and outside.

You can't get from one side of the contained region to the other side without going through the boundary.

The boundary of an object will always be an closed object?